

Work begins on Schofields park

WORK is underway on the first and largest park at Stockland's Altrove community at Schofields.

The 1.6 hectare hilltop park is located on Overly Crescent and will feature multi-age play elements, grassed recreational areas and a play tower.

Stockland residential development general manager Richard Rhydderch said the developer was very excited to have construction underway on the 50 hectare community's first major amenity.

"This exciting new playground will reflect the true nature of Altrove as an inclusive, family-friendly community and an emerging destination for people from around the region," Mr Rhydderch said.

"Our very first residents at Altrove will soon have a beautiful location, with an amazing mountain backdrop where they can bring their children to play and catch up with friends."

Other highlights include an enclosed play area for children under five, an embankment with a built-in slide and ropes for climbing, a barbecue area and toilets with disabled access.

Mr Rhydderch said factors contributing to Altrove's success included the community's sought-after north-west location.

"The Schofields Train Station is right on our doorstep and this, together with the planned extension of the Sydney Metro Northwest Rail Link, will make Altrove possibly the most connected community in Sydney," Mr Rhydderch said.
