

STOCKLAND BUILDING GUIDES

Making the most of your display home visit

Stockland
it's your place

Tip:

Display Villages are generally located close to a Stockland Sales and Information Centre so you can find out which blocks of land are available and might suit the home you have in mind.

That new feeling

You know that new car smell and feel?

Imagine it ten-fold as you open the door to your brand new home!

If you're starting the search for your new home, there's no better way to experience that brand new feeling than to visit a Stockland Display Village. You will surely feel inspired by the latest designs, delightfully decorated interiors, and all the new mod cons on-site during your visit.

Most major builders have a selection of their latest home designs to show customers what is available, as new and interesting designs are constantly being generated.

Tips:

Home and land packages are a great way of getting a complete new home solution, so ask your Stockland Sales Professional about a package deal for your chosen home.

Our top tips

Grab it

The display village you're visiting is likely to have a printed guide to the homes on show that will help with this process – so be sure to pick one up. It is also a great idea to do some online research before your visit.

Enjoy it

Most display villages are located near a community park so consider taking a moment to reflect on your visit or release any built-up energy if the kids are in tow. Remember to enjoy your visit and get excited about the process of shopping for a brand new home!

Use it

Each display home has an experienced building representative on hand to explain anything you need to know and answer your questions. Take a business card and follow up any queries you might have after your visit.

Revisit it

Be sure to take the time to give each home the attention it deserves. If your time is limited or the kids are losing interest, it is wise to make a second visit rather than rush through your inspection.

Feel it – remember it

Trying to remember the details of your visit can be a daunting task. Take notes while you're at the display village to reflect on once you leave – these could also be invaluable when it comes time to discussing ways to personalise your home with your builder. During your visit, try to picture yourself actually living in the home. Stand at the kitchen bench, take a seat in the living room, or enjoy the outdoor or alfresco entertainment area.

Plan it

Plan your visit in advance by envisioning what sort of home is going to meet your needs. Have a clear idea of your necessary requirements and what elements might be on your wish list. If you already have a block of land in mind then find out which display homes would be appropriate for the location.
